DIY: Bow Slippers

I finally broke down and found a new pair of house shoes to replace my unbelievably cute Fossil ballet slippers that are only holding themselves together by hopes and prayers. I was on a mission to find both durable and cute house shoes, but instead I found that cute and durable don't really exist together unless you're willing to forfeit eating in order to pay for the ones that do have both qualities. Alas, I settled for Target... and then some cute ribbon and paint...

Things you'll need:

- Gromets/Eyelets
- Scissors

- Chalk
- Choice of ribbon
- Paint
- Cork topper

- 1. Use the chalk to map out where you'd like your pattern to be before you paint. If you want to do polka dots also, use the cork stopper dipped in a thin layer of paint to create nearly perfect circles. I chose to paint with a bronze color, and I also added a few extra touches to the back of the slippers (see below).
- 2. Use the chalk once again to placement mark the placement for your gromets.
- 3. Use scissors to create holes just a bit smaller than the size of your gromets. To be honest, cutting the holes was the hardest part for me because the slippers were so thick. It basically just takes a little elbow grease (if you have a secret for this, fill me in!).
- 4. Insert the gromets, and then string your ribbon through.

Voila!

Total Cost: $15!

Oh, and most importantly, the winner for last week's Shabby Apple Giveaway is -

Congrats Taylor! E-mail me!

Thank you everyone for taking the time to enter the giveaway. Your support for Sugar & Cloth means more to me than I can say! Everyone has to start somewhere, and I'm glad that you're part of the journey with me!

All of my love, Ash.

Taylor Smith says:

Liked both on facebook!

Reply

