

A Soldier Blue Milk Paint Cabinet with a White Wax Finish

I love the uniqueness of this piece, both the fronts flip down and the top lift open as well. It was previously a stereo cabinet, but now it can be almost anything - a bar, a desk, or just to hide keys and papers in an entryway. Its milk paint finish has so much variation and the white wax brings out the wood grain and carved details. I removed the speaker (after I had taken pictures) and lined with inside with some pretty paper, so it's ready to find a new home and serve a new purpose.

Linking up with: