

whatever

Mirror Dresser- for $35

Remember these guys- They are now very good friends {I received two old dressers from Libby- this is not the one that I used. Couldn't find the before picture {my computer crashed last week, and I'm still trying to find everything...but the dresser looked just like this one in every-way, except the top drawers were different.}

What I did-

- Saved the mirror- which was cut into pieces to fit the dresser- $20
- Painted the dresser- Ralph Lauren- Regent Metallics- silver Base
- Purchased simple handles for $15
- Glued the mirror to the dresser using- Liquid Nails- Mirror adhesive (in the silver and gold tube)
- Dresser- free from Libby

Here is a step by step look:

Applying the glue- mirror next

And here is another one with Emma in it...just because she is so cute.

One more piece done.

Tips- Save all your old mirrors, you never know when, or how you will use them. I asked my glass guy how much it would have cost me if I didn't have my own mirror. He said somewhere between $80 and $150. More if you wanted the ends beveled.

So if you are doing a bathroom redo and it has a big piece of mirror in it...SAVE IT! if you don't want it, I will take it off your hands. =)

I have some fun ideas for the top of the dresser....I just put a few items on it for now...so it didn't look so bare.

I'm linking this with The inspired Room, Click on over here to see so many creative people.

